- Tickets are $80, include lift, rentals, & lesson
- Simply become cooler as a person

In the hushed corridors of Northeastern University, amidst the chaos of impending spring break and the lingering aftermath of midterms, there exists a sanctuary of serenity: the NUHOC Archives. Stepping into this sacred space, one is immediately transported back through the annals of time, to a realm where adventures were etched into the very fabric of existence. The air is heavy with the scent of old parchment and the whispers of bygone tales. Rows upon rows of weathered journals, faded photographs, and ancient artifacts line the shelves, each bearing witness to the daring escapades of generations past. Here, amidst the relics of exploration and discovery, one cannot help but feel a sense of reverence for those intrepid souls who ventured into the unknown, leaving behind a legacy of courage and curiosity. As the chaos of campus life rages on outside, within the walls of the NUHOC Archives, time stands still, and the spirit of adventure beckons, waiting to be rediscovered by those brave enough to seek it out.

- Day Trips
- Member led trips
  - Stairs: matt blanco goes up and down stairs in mission hill

What is the Loj?

- Literally
  - The loj is our property in New Hampshire where we go to enjoy the outdoors
  - It is about 3:30 minutes away by car
  - We are on the border with Maine and near the town of Shelburne
  - Currently, two enclosed structures are on property, the war barn and the funhouse which combined sleep about 30 people
  - From the loj, you can do any number of outdoors activity in the white mountains such as ski, hike, climb, swim, and more
- Emotionally
  - It's the loj :)

LCT Process

- If you come up to the loj three times, you can give a speech at a meeting to become a loj committee trainee
- Once you finish a 26 item list you become a Loj committee member!!!
- You get keys for life!!!
